Job Description Community Development & Government Affairs Fellow

Position Title: Community Development & Government Affairs Fellow
Supervisor: Director of Government Affairs and Advocacy
Department: Program

FLSA Status: Non-exempt, Hourly
Classification: Temporary, Full-time
Location: Portland, Oregon preferred, with the option to negotiate a remote location subject to periodic travel to Portland
Salary: $52,737-$69,677

Position Summary:

The community development & government affairs fellow for the National Indian Child Welfare Association (NICWA) is responsible for mobilizing and assisting tribal and urban Indian communities and programs to respond to the needs of American Indian/Alaska Native children and families through efforts to improve public policy and programs at the tribal, state/county, and federal levels to support effective services for the general well-being of Native children and families.

The position will build organizational knowledge and support effective partnerships and networks, resulting in improved public policies, funding, and other resources to support child welfare and related supportive services and proper implementation of the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA).

Primary Responsibilities:

- Develop and maintain relationships with tribal and urban Indian communities
- Facilitate dialogue within and between governments—tribal, county, and state
- Create materials and resources for tribal partners
- Participate in the planning, delivery, and evaluation of effectiveness of child welfare training and technical assistance
- Build capacity to be an effective advocate when interacting with child welfare agencies, courts, and policymakers
- Under leadership of the director of government affairs and advocacy, ensure that constituents and partner organizations receive policy updates and information regarding the needs and strengths of Native children, families, and communities

Essential Functions:

- Helps to plan and deliver accurate, timely, and effective consultation, coaching, technical assistance or training in response to requests from the field on child welfare and related supportive services
- Learns to use NICWA frameworks and tools to assess, identify needs, and provide effective technical assistance to meet the needs of Native children and families; ensures community development efforts are shaped by and responsive to the cultural context of the community being served
- Supports, builds, and maintains relationships with tribal and urban Indian communities and partners; facilitates dialogue and capacity building in tribal communities through emails, phone calls, or onsite visits; participates in creating opportunities for peer-to-peer networking, connecting, or sharing of tribal best practices
- Creates and disseminates written materials and oral presentations of information in coordination with the NICWA government affairs and advocacy director to tribal and non-tribal partners, constituents, advocates, and NICWA board members such as newsletters, testimony, policy analysis, briefing papers, resource guides, best practice tools, articles, and proposals; develops presentations, curriculum, trainings, or workshops on the topics of child welfare, ICWA, and related child welfare services
